Croatia continues to be a healthy and safe holiday option

Croatia is absolutely ready to welcome guests and normal tourist inflow and continues to regularly update its health and safety recommendations and border controls in order to continue to provide a healthy and safe holiday destination for those willing and able to travel.

Croatia is one of the few Mediterranean countries in which inbound visitor numbers have been growing and tourist traffic is currently recording solid numbers, and along with Slovenia and Slovakia, we continue to record the lowest number of infected people from COVID-19 per million inhabitants.

We have a sufficient number of different accommodation facilities to ensure social distancing options, diverse content and tourist staff adhering to epidemiological measures as the health and safety protocols against the coronavirus throughout the country are set at a high level and all the prerequisites and conditions for a safe tourist summer are provided.

During the pandemic, the Croatian National Tourist Board created campaigns and maintained the visibility of Croatia through the media and social networks, which is evident in the fact that there are currently just under 250,000 guests in the country.

This is a great opportunity to visit the most popular Croatian destinations and tourist sites that are otherwise full of tourists at this time of year, and now they can visit with fewer crowds, providing peace of mind.
